Lawrence Ritchie brings extensive litigation experience to the Commission's adjudicative function. A former partner at Osler, Hoskin & Harcourt in Toronto, he was a litigator for almost 20 years, specializing in general corporate, securities and commercial litigation.

Lawrence served as enforcement counsel in a secondment to the Ontario Securities Commission in 1993. Upon return to his law firm, he acted for various market participants in a wide range of securities-related proceedings. He also advised public corporations and their officers and directors on internal and regulatory investigations, and reputational risk management.

Effective July 13, 2009, Lawrence was seconded to the Canadian Securities Transition Office, where he serves as Executive Vice-President and Senior Policy Advisor.
